This application contains claims directed to more than one species of the generic invention. These species are deemed to lack unity of invention because they are not so linked as to form a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1.

The species are as follows:

the different permutations of the Lewis acid/Lewis acid complex including (i) metal halides and (ii) boron halides.

Applicant is advised that, should they elect that the Examiner first proceed with an Examination of the invention as it pertains to the employment of metal halides, Applicant should select for early consideration one of the metal halides outlined in, for instance, claim 6.

Applicant is required, in reply to this action, to elect a single species to which the claims shall be restricted if no generic claim is finally held to be allowable. The reply must also identify the claims readable on the elected species, including any claims subsequently added. An argument that a claim is allowable or that all claims are generic is considered non-responsive unless accompanied by an election.

Upon the allowance of a generic claim, applicant will be entitled to consideration of claims to additional species which are written in dependent form or otherwise include all the limitations of an allowed generic claim as provided by 37 CFR 1.141. If claims are added after the election, applicant must indicate which are readable upon the elected species. MPEP § 809.02(a).

The claims are deemed to correspond to the species listed above in the following manner:

Art Unit: 1796

in light of the way the claims are written, all of the species read on all of the claims. Even claims 7 and 16, which stipulate that the Lewis acid "includes" boron trifluoride, does not preclude the employment of other Lewis acids. Rather, it merely says that BF_3 should be one of the Lewis acids used.

The following claim(s) are generic: 1-19.

The species listed above do not relate to a single general inventive concept under PCT Rule 13.1 because, under PCT Rule 13.2, the species lack the same or corresponding special technical features for the following reasons: the Examiner can only speculate that Applicant regards the combination of an organic polymer bearing hydrolyzable silyl groups and one of numerous Lewis acids as their invention. That is to say, it is believed that Applicant is not relying on either of these materials alone as a basis for patentability. Indeed, both of these materials are extremely familiar to the skilled artisan. In this connection, it is not immediately obvious to the Examiner that, were he to find, for instance, a description of a composition comprising the aforementioned silylated polymer and iron bromide, that all other embodiments of the Lewis acid component of the claimed invention would be recognized as obvious alternatives to the iron bromide. In fact, the Examiner would likely have to establish on a case-by-case basis the functional equivalence of said other lewis acids within the content in which iron bromide is being employed. This is a burdensome endeavor in the Examiner's estimation and, thus, the election of species requirement is justified.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species or invention to be examined even though the requirement may be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected invention.

The election of an invention or species may be made with or without traverse. To preserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse.

Applicant is reminded that upon the cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, the inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a request under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(i).
